REDWOOD CITY, SAN MATEO COUNTY, CALIFORNIA, FRIDAY, APRIL 12, 1929.

ESTABLISHED 1859

HARBOR BONDS AND CHARTER APPROVED

About 50% Vote Out
Give Both Projects
Majorities

The electors of Redwood City on Tuesday expressed their approval of both propositions which were presented to them at a special election on that day. The first was to incur a bonded indebtedness of $55,000 for acquiring 31.03 acres of waterfront land for development as a municipal wharf and warehouse center. The second proposition was for the ratification of the charter which was drawn up by a board of 15 freeholders elected by the people on February 7.

Both propositions received a strong majority, the vote on the bond proposition being 1106 for the issuance of the bonds and 465 against the issuance. The vote on the charter was 1402 for adoption and 160 against.

In the first precinct, polling place Frank Larrouy's barn on Marshall street, 156 votes were cast for the bonds and 50 against. The second precinct, polling place George Elchinkotter's residence on Stambaugh street, polled 154 votes for the bonds and 62 against. In the third precinct, polling place at the northeast corner of Orchard avenue and Woodside road, 54 votes were cast for the proposition and 29 against.

The fourth precinct, with the polling place in the Corey Dudley residence on Lincoln avenue, 114 votes were cast for the bonds and 40 against. The fifth precinct, polling place residence of Mrs. D. E. Moore on Jackson street, showed 148 votes for the bonds and 71 against. In the sixth, with polling place at the home of Mrs. James Irving on Fulton street, 163 votes were cast for the bonds and 50 against them. The seventh, polling place at the club house of the Redwood City Woman's Club, 200 votes were given for the bonds and 83 against. In the eighth, polling place the office of the Walter Realty Co. on the highway, 118 votes were cast for and 40 against the issuing of bonds.

The bond issue required at least a two-thirds majority for passage. The vote cast gives the measure about 60 votes more than the required majority.

The adoption of the new charter for Redwood City proved even more popular than the issuance of the harbor bonds. The votes on this proposition by precincts was as follows:

Precinct	For	Against
1	203	43
2	183	32
3	73	11
4	143	7
5	148	71
6	162	50
7	200	83
8	118	40
Total	1106	465

The vote was rather light considering the interest taken in both propositions. Less than half of the registered voters expressed their preference by going to the polls.

The Redwood City Promotion Association will hold a dance on Saturday evening, April 27, at the Episcopal parish house. This affair is a benefit for the McKinley school. The arrangements are being made by a committee consisting of Mrs. James Miller and Charles Ward.

Exchanges Told Of State History

Members of the Redwood City Exchange Club were treated to a most entertaining and instructive talk Tuesday evening on the early history of California. The speaker was John Warren, curator of the museum at Golden Gate Park, and past grand historiographer of the Native Sons of the Golden West.

Barren's talk dealt with the mission days and of the gold rush of '49, and included many incidents of an interesting character. Mrs. Barren, wife of the speaker, was a member of the Arguello family, which in early days were owners of the Rancho de las Pulgas, comprising a great part of the southern end of San Mateo county, including the site of Redwood City.

Bud Toles, a member of the University of California Glee Club at the same time Kendall Towne was a member of that organization and now a member of Brick Morse's Collegiate, furnished a couple of comedy numbers which added much to the evening's entertainment.

Harvey Connor was chairman of the meeting. The weekly historical talk was given by J. W. Locker, who talked on the origin of the United States mint.

President Towne and Secretary Lindsey Grey were elected as delegates to the state convention of Exchange which will be held next month at Pasadena. Dr. W. B. Langston and A. G. Kenney were elected as alternate delegates.

Ira Potter, South San Francisco banker and District Governor for this district of Exchange was a visitor at the meeting.

Students to Debate On Plea of Insanity

Debating in the second series of debates held thus far in the competition for the league championships, four Sequoia student-debaters will battle Bellarmine and Los Gatos on the dates of April 18 and 19.

Both debates of the previous series were won by the Sequoia team by scores of three to nothing—the highest possible score, and consequently the members of the debate classes, teams and clubs entertain high hopes for the ensuing debates.

Hubert Barry and Kenneth Bartheaux will uphold the negative side of the question, Resolved: That the plea of temporary insanity as a defense in criminal cases should be abolished, while either Lawrence Driven or Waldo Munday and Wilbur Hogevoil will uphold the affirmative side of the question against Los Gatos.

This debate, as in the previous debate, will be held in the Sequoia auditorium and admittance fee of 10 cents will be charged.

Dr. W. H. Murphy, who has been in Austria for the past six months taking special work in diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat, has returned and is now making his home in San Mateo. Dr. Murphy is sharing the office of Dr. Harry E. Mason in the Sequoia building for a time each afternoon.

Redwood Aerle No. 418 of Eagles will hold a card party this evening in the Odd Fellows Hall. Refreshments will be served. Score cards will be 25 cents.

W. A. CROWELL LAID TO REST

Death Ends Colorful
Career of Local Citizen

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at the James Crowe Undertaking parlors for William Albert Crowell, who passed away at his Webster street home, following a long illness. The service was conducted by Rev. C. H. Stevens, formerly pastor of the Congregational church, and for many years a close personal friend of the deceased.

William Crowell came to Redwood City in 1913 to assume the management of the Crowe undertaking parlors and had been a resident of this city since that time. Prior to that he had been engaged in the undertaking business in Auburn, Placer county. During his residence here he became prominently identified with the religious, social and civic life of the town.

He was an ardent worker in the Congregational church and was for many years secretary of that organization. He was a member of Redwood City Masonic lodge and from 1918 to 1926 was the secretary. He was a past master of Auburn lodge of Masons, and past master by affiliation of Redwood City Lodge. He was also a member of the San Jose Scottish Rite bodies, of Islam Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of the York Rite, of Bay View Lodge I. O. O. F., and of the Knights of Pythias.

William A. Crowell was born in Massachusetts 69 years ago, and spent his boyhood in the state of Maine. When 19 years of age he came to California for his health, as he was all during his life a severe sufferer from asthma. He worked as a farm hand in the San Joaquin valley. Later he entered the employ of the Southern Pacific railroad and was for many years a passenger conductor on the valley line of that company.

Later he entered the undertaking business in Auburn, where he remained for several years. During his time in Auburn he became public administrator and coroner of Placer county. Later he purchased a business in Sacramento, which he conducted until 1913, when he came here to assume management of the James Crowe Co., one of the pioneer undertaking firms of the county.

Mr. Crowell was married to his wife, Mrs. Florence Crowell, the former Miss Crowe, daughter of the founder of Crowe Undertaking Co. A daughter by a former marriage, Mrs. Elaine DeYoung of Sacramento, also survives.

Gonzales Manibog, Former Student in High School, Here

Two young men, G. Manibog, A. B., L. L. M., and M. Montano, L.L.B., were visiting in this city and the high school last Friday. Manibog was a special student in the local high school in 1913 with another Filipino, Adriano Medina, who is now an engineer in the island. Manibog went to Indiana from here, where he studied law and was conferred with the degree of LL. B. in 1917. He went to Chicago to pursue his post-graduate work. In 1919 he was instructor of Spanish in Loyola University, Chicago, and in the United States Army Hospital School at Fort Sheridan, Ill. In 1920-21 he occupied a chair in the University of Kansas, Lawrence, being an assistant professor of Spanish. He went back to the islands and became a politician. In the past few years he has been connected with the Philippine Bureau of Education. He came to the states for the second time on a visit.

Manibog had expected to meet some of the boys and girls and teachers of the local high school, but was disappointed, having met only two of the teachers of the faculty of 1913. He expressed his great admiration for the great changes that have taken place during the past 16 years in Redwood City, Atherton and Menlo Park. He extends his best wishes through the columns of this paper to all his classmates in chemistry in 1913, as well as to the other schoolmates. His permanent home address is Lasag, Flows Norte, Philippine Islands. He left his sweet recollections of the past for his old schoolmates and wishes them happiness, prosperity and long life.

PIONEER MAN OF SAN MATEO COUNTY DIES

Funeral Services For George Bell Held
Wednesday

By D. E. O'KEEFE

George Bell, who passed away last Sunday in this city following a stroke of paralysis, was one of the oldest pioneers in the county and came from a family who crossed the plains in a covered wagon. The deceased was born in Sacramento, nearly 78 years ago, but as a boy came to San Mateo county in 1841, spending his whole life in the county on the Bell farm, originally consisting of 2000 acres. Here he passed his life, leaving only when the twilight of his existence had been reached, then to come over the mountains to reside in Menlo Park and Redwood City, bidding farewell to the hills and dales of his boyhood home.

Mr. Bell married early in life, rearing fifteen children, eleven of whom are living. One of the sons, Robert Bell, is the assistant fire chief of the Redwood City Fire Department. Another son, Fred, by a second wife, was killed in an accident at Los Angeles, the day before his father passed away.

James W. Bell, father of the deceased, was a sturdy pioneer who came across the plains from the east in a covered wagon in 1850, landing like nearly all the travelers of that day at Sacramento, the goal of the early gold seekers. After a short stay there he moved his family to San Francisco to engage in business. He purchased 25 acres of land at Eighteenth and Mission streets for a small sum. Afterwards this parcel of land was traded for 2,000 acres in the mountain region, lying between La Honda and San Gregorio. A portion of the tract is known as Bellvale. Here he toiled and here also his sons labored for half a century. Had Bell a little of the vision of a number of the early pioneers and kept this city property he could have counted his fortune by the millions.

It is surprising how the earlier settlers sought the mountain regions of the county when the low lands stretching from Colma to Santa Clara county could be secured for a nominal price. They appeared to be lured by the prospect of finding the fertile soil of the valley for the less attractive slopes of the hills and mountains that have not advanced in value while the valley lands soared in price.

James W. Bell was the father of eight children, Richard, James, George, Frank, William Bell and Mrs. Tim Rowe, Tillie White and Mrs. Emma Sears. All the sons, with the exception of James, who was a twin brother of the deceased, have passed away. Frank Bell was the father of Richard Bell, the popular deputy district attorney of San Mateo county.

The greater number of the children clung to the old homestead. It was the wish of the elder Bell that the family should remain on the ranch to enjoy the open spaces, to take pleasure in the lowing herds of the slopes and find comfort in looking over the vast fields of growing grain. They all respected the wish and remained on the farm, except Richard who early in life was appointed to the San Francisco police force, where he made a splendid record. His son, Doctor Dixon Bell is a prominent dentist of San Francisco and some years ago married the pretty daughter of the late F. H. McEvoy.

The deceased came here about five years ago and prior to that was employed at the base hospital. He was widely known in the county, and his death is mourned by a large number of friends and relatives. Funeral services were held Wednesday at the parlors of Layne & Tinney and were conducted by Rev. R. J. Currie of the Congregational church. Interment was in Alta Mesa cemetery.

Redwood Man Dies After Auto Wreck

James Hansen, Redwood City building contractor, who was injured in an automobile accident last Wednesday at the intersection of James and Iris streets, passed away Sunday at the Mills Memorial hospital in San Mateo as the result of his injuries.

An inquest was held by County Coroner J. C. McGovern Wednesday at the parlors of Layne & Tinney, at which time all facts concerning the accident were discussed. It was the decision of the jury that death occurred as the result of a fractured skull. Addison Hall of 7th avenue, driver of the other car, was held to be innocent of all blame in connection with the crash. The accident occurred at the intersection as Hall was driving on Jefferson avenue and Hansen was driving on the intersecting street. Hall escaped without injuries.

Funeral services were held Wednesday morning for the contractor, and were at the parlors of Layne & Tinney. Rev. J. F. Morazic conducted the services. Interment was in Monterey in the afternoon.

THE "TOBACCO BRIDES"

THE Virginia Company advanced the passage money of the young women who came over to marry and help the early settlers establish homes.

As each bridegroom was required to pay to the company "120 pounds of the best leaf tobacco" for his bride's passage, the young ladies were referred to as the "tobacco brides."

Although tobacco is no longer used as currency, much money still "goes up in smoke" if it is not deposited quickly in a bank account.

POULTRY

BLACKHEAD CAN BE CONTROLLED

Disease Is Caused by Animal Germ in Young Fowls.

Blackhead of turkeys is one of the most dreaded diseases of this class of poultry, but destructive as it is, the trouble may be controlled.

"We find that blackhead is caused by an animal germ," says Dr. H. F. Kaupp, head of the poultry department at state college. "It generally attacks young turkeys from five to seven weeks of age on up until they mature. To test definitely whether a bird has blackhead, one has but to open a dead bird and if blackhead is present, the liver will appear to be spotted. If the liver be cut through, these spots of dead tissue will be found scattered throughout. To prevent future spread of the trouble, the eggs for hatching should be soaked for ten minutes in a 1 to 10,000 solution of bichloride of mercury and bathed in an incubator or by a turkey hen away from chickens. Where blackhead is not on the premises, these precautions are not necessary. A drug called sulphophenol may also be used. Always give the birds all the buttermilk or soured milk that they will drink. This tones up the general health conditions."

To learn more of the real nature of this disease, Doctor Kaupp will begin field studies with turkeys in the four mountain counties of Ashe, Madison, Jackson and Avery. These four counties have many turkeys and the owners have suffered losses in the past by reason of the blackhead trouble. Doctor Kaupp states that all the experimental work he has conducted under actual farm conditions and he hopes to find definite and practical control or preventative methods which may be used by all farmers.

Turkey-growing offers good profits, especially to the grower who is prepared to put first-class birds on the market at Thanksgiving and Christmas. There are many successful turkey farmers in various parts of North Carolina and it is possible to find a practical control for blackhead, the industry should easily become more profitable.

Runner Ducks Classified as Heavy Egg Layers

Runner ducks are classified as laying ducks and are the only breed recognized in that classification. In many instances Runners have produced as many eggs as chickens. If managed properly ducks of this breed may be expected to lay almost as well as hens. These ducks are small in size, the males weighing four to five and one-half pounds and the females three and a half to four pounds. In spite of the fact that they are heavy layers they mature quite rapidly and make good broilers. They are killed for this purpose when they weigh about two and a half to three pounds. These ducks are long and narrow bodied. The body is carried very erect. There are three varieties of Runner ducks: Tarn and White Runners, Fawn Runners, and White Runners. In all three varieties the markings are made in the proportion of one drake to each six or eight ducks.

Poultry Hints

A point to keep in mind in feeding mash to the turkeys is that they need the vitamin D provided by a good high-grade cod-liver oil just as badly as do chickens.

Most turkey raisers will wish to hatch the eggs in an incubator and brood the poults artificially. By doing this they can keep the turkey hens in production almost continuously.

There's no better feed for young poults than plenty of sour milk. Feed five times daily at first, but don't over feed, and be sure to keep grit, charcoal and clean water before them at all times.

Build open sheds for turkeys to roost under as soon as they begin to want to fly up to roost.

Keep young turkeys shut up until one week old. Then turn out for a few hours each day during the warm part of the day until they are two weeks old.

Each turkey egg is worth a great deal more than a single chicken egg, and because of this fact the loss is greater when the eggs do not hatch or when they hatch into weak turkeys.

Start birds on bran and chabber mash if possible; otherwise, use corn bread.

Don't try a late hatch unless you have separate enclosures for these late turkeys. Two sets of turkeys don't mix any better than two sets of chickens do.

Usually it is necessary to use one gander to every three or four hens. A young gander will do provided he is fully matured. Genders may be turned out in any moderately cold weather.

It is wise to keep the turkeys away from the chicken flock. This should be an iron-clad rule in the case of baby turkeys or poults, and under most circumstances it would also be advisable to keep the breeding flock away from the chickens.

Chickens by nature desire to roost or work in dusty places. Hens having strong currents of air entering by cracks, windows or doors; also those that have fast movement of air near the floor are just the kind that cause some of the colds.

DIPPING ITO SCIENC

Why the Dead Sea Is Salty

One cannot sink in the Dead sea because of the density of salt. There are three causes for the abundance of this salt: many salt springs high empty into it; natural drainage of surface water over ancient salt ranges; and evaporation of water from the sea leaves its salt to remain.

Kentucky School Uses Radio for Class Work

Ashland, Ky.—Rad educational programs furnish part of the regular class work at the Cadet school in South Ashland. During school day a set in one of the five rooms is tuned in to various stations, offering subjects of interest, and teachers in the rooms can connect up with the program when they desire.

The set was installed in the school to make use of the radio programs broadcast by Walter Winchell, H. R. Brown, school principal, soon decided that daily educational programs would be of value to students, so additional speakers were installed.

Lo, the Rich Indian!

Oklahoma City, Okla.—The Osage and Quapaw Indian tribes enjoy untold riches because the white man put them on land he did not want.

When the reservations were marked off, nobody dreamed that some day the hills given to the Osages would be dotted with oil derricks and the prairie set aside for the Quapaws would yield sine and lead as well as hay.

Today the Osages are the richest people on earth, the 2,229 "head rights" or estates in the tribe exceeding $100,000 each in value. Unlike the Quapaws, the Osages held their wealth in common.

The lead and zinc holdings of the Quapaws bring more than $1,500,000 in royalties to 45 restricted members of the tribe, but marriage and inheritance have served to distribute the money generally among the other members.

Mrs. Anna Beaver Bear Hallam, restricted owner of land on which is located the Anna Beaver mine, owned by Harry Payne Whitney of New York, gets some of the largest royalty payments. For several months her income from the mine piled up at the rate of $5,000 a month. Four years ago she was almost penniless.

The Quapaws were a nomadic tribe when they were placed on their present reservation in 1887. The land was valued at a dime an acre by white men.

Under the treaty by which the tribe was given the reservation, the government, in view of their wretched and impoverished condition, agreed to move the Quapaws to their new home and to furnish them live stock, farm implements, firearms and other equipment.

Nothing except hay was produced on the tribe's new land. White men leased it paying the Indians a pittance. The town of Quapaw sprang up and became the greatest tax-paying point in the world for a time. The Indians cared nothing for the hay, the land or much of anything else. They wanted to fish and hunt and be left alone.

In 1905 zinc ore was found while a water well was being drilled on the land of Felix Dardene, a Quapaw Indian. The driller knew the metal in the cuttings from his drill denoted a rich strike, but he lacked the business sense to take advantage of the opportunity to win a great fortune.

He quit work and drove to Baxter Springs, Kan., where he spread the news. A bystander in one of the crowds the driller drew slipped away and visited Dardene, leaving all his land and much surrounding it. He made a fortune.

A man with a wife and five children had control of 5,000 acres of land and received $21,000 quarterly until the oldest child reached the age of maturity.

Distinction of having the largest Osage family was held by Clement de Noya. He controlled eleven headrights, including his own, his wife's and those of their nine children.

This family has received a much as $40,000 in one quarterly payment.

Historic Oak at Rome to Be Protected by City

Rome.—The famous oak on the Janiculum hill overlooking Rome, under which the great poet Tasso dreamed and muses, and St. Philip Neri played with the children of the neighborhood, is about to be enclosed and protected by the park service of the municipality.

Stricken by lightning a short time ago, little remains of the tree so intimately associated with Italian literary and religious tradition.

Social Rules Are Rigid

Washington.—Hostesses who come into this capital city with the new administration are certain to find that their social knowledge, however extensive it may be, is not adequate to take care of every situation likely to arise during their stay.

Occasions of ceremony in the nation at capital follow certain rules and regulations, ignorance of which often brings humiliation; and indifference to those rules calls down stern criticism upon the offender.

Indeed, it is the wise newcomer who acquaints herself with the rules. By so doing she will not only simplify life for everyone, but will also save herself much embarrassment.

Washington is different from European capitals in this respect. On the continent when statesmen are dined and feted, there is a "protocol" which assigns to every one his or her relative rank, and does so with the official sanction of the government.

No such court of appeals exists in the capital of this country. There are available in the State department certain rules and regulations. The department, however, refuses to be quoted as an authority and supplies no written lists.

It is up to the individual to do the proper thing.

And the proper thing to the uninitiated at times presents a real problem. Foreign ambassadors and ministers are not, as Lincoln is said to have been: "Willing to follow anyone who wants to precede them." They represent their country or their rulers, whose dignity they are responsible for upholding in their own persons.

Each year Washington sees men come here in official positions of great importance. They represent sovereign states, each one proud of its dignity. An affront to them is an affront to those states.

Thus the wives of Washington officials are faced by conditions not duplicated anywhere. And they soon come to know that knowledge of the rank of officials at dinners is necessary, not merely in giving entertainments, but even in attending those given by others.

SELFISHNESS OF SMOKERS

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I have no objection to smoking, either to a man's smoking or a woman's for that matter. If her nervous system will stand it. Smoking hurts some people, and has little effect upon others. In general that is their business, their nerves to be put into a jangle, their breaths to be strengthened. The thing that I object to is the selfishness of smokers, their utter disregard of the comfort or rights of other people who don't like smoke. They have too often become the slaves of tobacco and they must pay tribute wherever they are no matter who suffers at their hands. I don't care for raw onions, but if you do it is all right with me just so you do not blow your onion scented breath in my face. If you are addicted to eating pie I make no objection excepting that I don't want the crumbs scattered over me.

Smithers sitting behind me at the game with the wind in my direction was smoking a very heavy cigar. The smoke all drifted in my direction and before the game was over I had had the benefit of at least a dollar's worth of fumes. For Smithers lighted one cigar from another and smoked continuously. My blue serge suit was light gray from the ashes which Smithers absently dropped off upon my shoulders. If never occurred to Smithers that I might not enjoy his heavy cigar smoke; it never went through his head that he was making me look like an ash man. He was thinking only of his own pleasure and never considered anyone else.

Ethel, who is much addicted to the cigarette, was invited at vacation time to a party in a conservative little town in which none of the really respectable young women smoke. Ethel just couldn't get along without a cigarette, you know, so she puffed away to the annoyance and discomfort of most of the young women at the dance.

"Dumb," you will say, "very dumb." Yes, and quite completely selfishly bad mannered.

Two men were smoking in the bus as we drove about Stanley Park and the environs of Vancouver. The day was chilly and the windows were closed. They were smoking hard as if they were working on piecework and the coach soon became close to suffocation. They didn't notice that they were interfering with the comfort of anyone else. They were in deed quite astonished and somewhat disgruntled when the conductor suggested that smoking was not permitted in the car. Each looked at the other and raised his eyebrows as if to say, "Well, ain't that the limit!"

There was a time in the old Victorian days when, if one were thinking of smoking in a crowd, he had manners enough to try to discover if his smoking would annoy people but not any more. The smoker puffs away wherever he (or she) takes the notion. It's selfish and inexcusably bad manners.

SAME PRESCRIPTION HE WROTE IN 1892

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as today. People lived normal lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings. The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe bowel stimulant. This prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative. It has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds, fevers. At your druggist, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. B. B. Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

Therefore—Bob, age four, does not take kindly to the economical ways of living. One morning he took all the chairs in the dining room and moved them into the living room, to build a house. When the task was almost completed, his mother arrived on the scene. She was horrified to see her new overstuffed furniture being misused. She angrily said, "Bob don't you know that is mother's company room and she doesn't allow you to mess it up like that?" Looking around the room with a very sober face, Bob replied, "Well, I don't see any company."

The Bond Election

EVEN the most ardent workers for the bond issue, which was so generously passed by the voters at the election Tuesday, heaved a sigh of relief when the votes were totaled. Throughout the campaign which was carried on to secure the passage of this proposition there was some doubt as to its passage.

There was no doubt as to the value of the proposed development. But there was a general feeling that it would be hard to put a bond issue over no matter what might be the return on the investment. The returns Tuesday proved these fears false. The people of Redwood City saw an opportunity for a great development, and were glad to accept it—were glad to make the necessary sacrifice that their town might go ahead.

Those who say that no bond issue can be passed here, do not give the people of this city credit for reason and intelligence. No bond issue could be passed here which does not give promise of bringing a good return either in saving to the town or in bettered living conditions. But when a proposition is put before the people which is plainly for the good and progress of the town, that proposition will win popular approval.

The step taken by the voters on Tuesday is one of progress, and one which will yield returns in the future. The voters have acted wisely and will not regret their action.

So also with the charter. The overwhelming vote given this proposal leaves no doubt as to its popularity. And the rehabilitation of the city's form of government is also an act of progress. With a more efficient government a development of an industrial zone and the finest residential possibilities in the state, the future of Redwood City is assured.

Opportunity

HOW often one hears it said, "I could have been as great as he, but I was never given the opportunity." What is this wonderful thing so frequently referred to and to whom is it restricted? Apparently, some believe that it is a gift offered to only a favored few, who, immediately upon receiving it, are born upward by its wonderful qualities to the height of fortune without further effort upon their part. Too often, those imbued with such a belief wait patiently with idle hands, contentedly dreaming of future success, each confident that the God of Chance, at whose shrine they worship, will choose him as the recipient of that wonderful gift by which he will be enabled to reach the height of fame. Thus, they dream on. Daily tasks, forced upon them through the necessity of living, are lightly regarded, held in contempt, and accomplished with no other thought than to end them in the quickest and easiest way possible. As time goes on and old age creeps upon them, the dreams fade to be replaced by the realization of wasted lives. Embittered, disillusioned, cynical, they cry of the cruelty of fate.

Too late they learned that opportunity is not a gift but the reward of preparation and tireless search that success is not a certain but only a possible result of opportunity. As a swimmer who has not trained is unable to get out in the channel and forge his way against the current, but must be content to stay near the shore among the driftwood, likewise, the man who has not prepared himself to battle with the current of life must drift aimlessly with his fellow idlers and seek sustenance from the tidbits that come within reach. It is not there that opportunity is found. Those who would grasp it must get out in midstream and have the determination and preparation to battle on up stream where lies the goal towards which it leads.

What's In A Name?

NOW comes Professor Larsen of Denmark, who discovers that Christopher Columbus was preceded to this continent by twenty years by two German seamen. The two Germans, Dietrich Lining and Hans Pothurst, are said to have arrived on the North American coast in 1472 and to have named their find Dorshland, or Codfish Land.

This may require a revision of history; we are not expert testimony on this point. But we are glad that the Italian has been credited with the discovery, at least. For isn't Columbia a prettier name than Codfish Land? That descending voice in the rear of the room was a man from Boston.

Fleeting Fame

ON Sunday, April 14, will fall the three-hundredth anniversary of the man who shares the honor of having developed the pendulum clock with Galileo; who first discovered that Saturn was surrounded by a ring; who devised a superior method of grinding telescope lenses and aided in developing accuracy in astronomical observation; and who even, in some respects, anticipated Einstein in the theories which are now causing the world-wide discussion.

How many people, other than scientists and historians, know who this man was? Probably one out of every thousand, or less. Professor Florian Cajori of the University of California department of mathematics, in commemorating this man recently, characterized him as one of the greatest mathematicians, physicists and astronomers of the seventeenth century. His name is Christian Huygens, a Hollander, born April 14, 1629.

Strangely enough, when Huygens first published his discoveries concerning Saturn, they were even less well understood than the theory advanced by Einstein is understood today. Huygens purposely made this announcement abstruse, so that he could assure himself of priority of discovery, and still have time to check his results before people knew definitely what he was doing. He converted his announcement into an anagram, rearranging all the letters in his sentences to read differently, just as one might rearrange the letters of the name of William Noyes, to read "I moyl in Law." At the end of four years he condescended to translate his announcement into readable script.

It is interesting to conjecture whether Einstein will suffer a fate similar to that of Huygens. Will the name Einstein, which today has a meaning to even the children in all civilized nations, be forgotten by all but scientists and historians in 2200 A. D.? Probably it will. Which leads us to the conclusion that the ancient kings who spent their lifetimes in erecting stone monuments to perpetuate their memory were not as foolish as they might seem.

Consistency, Thou Art A Jewel

WE wonder with just what interest European nations with their iron clad aristocracies, efete aristocracies we have heard Americans call them, have watched proceedings at Washington, the capitol of this most democratic country. Imagine the winks which must have gone round in those blue-blooded circles when social Washington was caught in furor over the question as to where the sister of the vice-president should rank socially, a matter in which even the state department took a hand.

Apparently we are neither so democratic nor as free from the iron hand of aristocracy as the school books would lead us to believe. Nor is one's own personal ability, integrity and personality enough to insure one the station to which these qualities may entitle one. In the case of Mrs. Everett Gann, sister of Vice-President Curtis, it took a letter to the state department, an hour's dispute within the American diplomatic corps, and a whale of a lot of political pressure.

Something to Think About

MANY of us were taken off our figurative feet the other day when a man who has made a specialty of population figures and city engineering made the statement that by 1950 a conservative estimate of population of San Mateo county would be 500,000 and that of Redwood City 58,000. We can hardly imagine this growth, yet his estimate was based on past development curves of this region and of the state as a whole.

To look forward to a city about the size of San Jose on the site of our present town, and that within 20 years, is a little hard to believe, yet it is not only possible, it has been accomplished already by a score of cities in the state. Many are still living who remember Los Angeles as a village and Oakland as a small town. Richmond even three decades ago was hardly more than a name.

And even here, those who can look back to Redwood City of 25 or 30 years ago, and think of the town as it then existed and compare it with Redwood City today, will be surprised to go over our city street by street and note the changes. The change has been gradual and we have grown accustomed, little to little, to the change without realizing, perhaps, just how great in the aggregate this change has been even within the past ten years.

A great city will entail great responsibilities, and it is well for us of today to begin to plan for the time when land will be more expensive, when parks and playgrounds will be the only places where children may enjoy the sunshine and open air, when parking spaces will be as scarce as they are now and business will be vastly increased. Tracts of woodland, fields and vacant city blocks should be purchased now along the peninsula for use at a time when the cities form a solid city from San Francisco to the county line. Such purchases as could be made now for use as parks in the future will be invaluable then.

CAPITOL NEWS BRIEFS

By ESTO BROUGHTON

By LAWRENCE MONFORT
SACRAMENTO, April 10—(CNE)—Heading up the storm-wracked channel of legislative debate three major measures affecting the farmers' pocketbook today were beating for the haven of California's statute book.

Proposal to lighten the agriculturalist's burden of personal property tax on automobiles but insuring participation of his neighbor, and plans to throw on the state half of the load of eliminating county highway grade crossings, battles over which are but half fought were balanced, however by the demand for a tobacco tax to finance an old folks' pension and extend the state's fire and conservation campaign, for years imperiled by scarcity of funds.

If California counties are to collect $2,300,000 in auto taxes they now are missing through faked addresses given at the time of registration, they must forego collection of personal property taxes on cars, and submit to state collection of amounts graded as to value, which the division of motor would add to $3 fees now charged, under the Murphy constitutional amendment now fighting for assembly recognition.

The division would return to the counties at least 95 percent of such collections on a basis of their actual registration. More than 400,000 automobiles, or about one in five, now are escaping taxation, according to Senator Daniel Murphy of San Francisco, author of the amendment, which scraped through the senate in a hard fight.

Balked in attempts to submit to voters proposals for a $20,000,000 state bond issue to be divided between state and county for grade crossing elimination purposes, and allocated to North and South under the Breed pension act, Senator Roy Pellom is seeking sanction for a $7,500,000 bonding plan which would devote the entire sum to cutting out death crossings on county roads.

Pellom, who is famed for his humanitarian measures, is much in earnest, but failure of his state highway grade crossing elimination bond issuance at the last election, and the act that only county roads would be benefited under his new proposal are militating against him. Still, a fire in the senate constitutional amendments committee, his measure has a chance if it reaches the senate floor, say farm bloc leaders.

The tobacco tax issue devolves into question of what price state philanthropy and conservation, for under the measure favored by Senator Jones of Marysville, himself a smoker, a tax of six percent on wholesalers would pass along to the ultimate consumer of cigarettes and he pipe puffer a $3,000,000 burden.

Shirring importance with the tax feature of his bill, Jones measure as now drawn would prohibit exploiting pictures of young girls and women in billboard cigarette advertising on the theory that injury is being done by propaganda setting forth smoking as the smart thing for women.

Sharing equally in the revenues would be the state forestry division, now hampered for funds because of enormous losses and consequent hazards caused by carelessness of smokers afield, and the newly launched program of aid for the aged sponsored by the Fraternal

Smokers to Pay For Fire Damage, So Senator Plans

Smoking up aid for the old age pension and forest fire protection, a tax of six percent on the wholesale price of all tobacco is being proposed today by Senator Ray Jones of Marysville.

Estimated to raise approximately $3,000,000 annually the tax will finance two worthy causes and relieve the common tax payer, Jones declares. Smokers are now responsible for fifty percent of the fires in the state, the senator says.

Plans are progressing for construction of state-owned shipside cold storage warehouse off San Francisco waterfront at cost of approximately $2,000,000.

Suddenly, out of a spring sky...

ALL was well on the telephone front on April 27, 1928. Suddenly, out of a spring sky, rain began to fall, and as night came on this turned into a furious storm of sleet, snow and wind. In 48 hours, 3700 telephone poles and 7000 miles of wire were down; 39 exchanges were isolated; 11,000 telephones were silent.

Repair crews were instantly sent to the scene. In record time 1000 men from five states were on the job. Within 72 hours the isolated exchanges and telephones were back in service.

BANK FOLDER TELLS STORY OF BANK USE

A new folder has just been issued by the First National Bank in its illustrated series on the general topic of "Money and Civilization." The current number, discussing the development of banking in America, shows how wide a gulf there is between the meaning of the word "bank" today and its meaning in the early days of the Nation. A hundred and fifty years ago, the folder points out, "bank" referred to a fund of available money like the sand in a sand bank. Subsequently it meant an issue of paper money.

The Pennsylvania Bank, organized to assist the starving Revolutionary army, was a fund to which one might subscribe just as people today contribute to a charity. Still later, "bank" was an institution whose charter gave it the privilege of issuing paper money.

Today a bank is primarily a place of safekeeping and a medium from which money can be paid. To the bank have been added a multiplicity of other functions which add to the public service that every financial institution renders.

The story of these various places of banking has been treated interestingly in the current folder of the local bank. It is brought out that America has been accorded the distinction of having been the laboratory for every experiment in banking and that Americans have been particularly susceptible to economic heresy. The day of experimenting is over, however, according to the writer of the bank's folder, and errors which in the past have been due to a lack of understanding of the nature of money have been abolished through education.

American banking today is extremely conservative; its operations Sunkist Trail being paved between Meos and Blythe. Martines - Construction of S. P. railroad bridge started recently.

are standardized and its procedure is based on tried and proven principles. Just how important a part the bank plays in our community and in our national life is one of the points stressed by the First National Bank. Truly, if we had no banks, we would have to invent them, for we could not get on without them.

Redlands people who travel out to Cajon Pass and the desert beyond are taking a new road out from San Bernardino, the Kendall Memorial Highway. The Coast Ice Cream Company's plant at South Gate has been enlarged and the owner, Earl R. McClary, is installing additional machinery. This equipment includes a fifteen-ton ice plant, which more than doubles the refrigeration capacity of the plant. Two new 600-gallon pasteurizing vats and other equipment are being added. Last year more than 800 gallons of ice cream were produced daily during the peak of the season.

A plan whereby every automobile operator and chauffeur in the State would receive a printed statement which will show when signed that they agree to hold himself or herself liable for property damage up to $10,000, and personal injury up to $5,000, resulting from the operation of any motor vehicle by the signee, is now being considered by the Legislature of the State of Maryland. The operator or chauffeur is to be required to sign the statement and return it to the automobile commissioner of the State, according to the bill. The driver would be given thirty days in which to settle in case of an accident. If payment is not made within that time the driver's license would be revoked until financial settlement was effected. The consideration of this proposed measure will be watched with close interest by the Automobile Club of Southern California and other organizations active in motor law developments.

San Leandro's street plan and home numbering system faces a complete reorganization as result of an ordinance introduced at the last meeting of the city council and which will probably be adopted at an early session. At present visitors, San Leandro residents and the Postal Department are often inconvenienced and confused, it is explained. The original numbering system was inaugurated when San Leandro was a much smaller community, but it has now expanded into a city of many new homes, streets and residential tracts.

A proposed solution of the road problem in California, based on a state unit program advocated by the California Development Association, is receiving statewide praise from highway experts and civic leaders. William May Garland, president of the association, lauded the solution recently given assurance in a joint resolution by the Assembly and Senate. "This solution of the highway problem," Garland said, "has added a new chapter to the state unit program fought for by the California Development Association."

Forming Famous Giant Battery

New York Giant Battery, Hubbell and Hogan.

Some famous batteries have held forth for the Giants in days gone by. Among them were Keefe and Ewing. Ruse and Farrell, Matty and Bresnahan, Margard and Myers, Nehf and Snyder, all of whom made baseball history that will never die and whose names were bywords in the land. It has been six years now since the Giant-Yankee world series in 1923 and no battery of outstanding achievements or personal appeal has come to the Polo Grounds to take their place.

Last year, however, a kid battery under the entitlements of Hubbell and Hogan began to perform in a manner to win the favor of those wise and loyal fans who mix so much joy and sorrow into their summer afternoons under the lee of Coogan's bluff.

Francis Hogan, the big catcher secured from Boston in the famous Hornsby deal, started the season just year at the Polo Grounds in a rather unimpressive way. He came here as a slugger, and he did hit the ball hard and often from the beginning, but his workmanship behind the plate lacked sureness and skill to any notion of polish. But under the magic hand of McGraw this bulky young man developed amazingly. By mid season he was rated as a corking good catcher if not a finished product.

act, and as for his hitting, it was like unto that of Bresnahan and Snyder in their hey-day. He played in 131 games and batted 233, making 23 doubles and 10 home runs, an imposing record for any second year man. And the big boy got to be quite a catcher. He improved day by day with an aptitude that tended to make McGraw forget about his backstop worries of the last five seasons. He did seem to have a cutter who could hit, and a hitter who showed much promise of being a fine catcher.

When McGraw called Carl Hubbell up from Beaumont, Texas, in mid season last year the announcement did not stir a ripple in baseball or press circles. But a few days later when he went in against the first place Cardinals and held them scoreless for some ten innings of an exciting game, he attracted plenty of attention. He lost the game in the last inning, it is true, but he showed so much courage, coolness and skill that day in a supreme test that his next appearance in the box was looked forward to with much interest.

He pitched that same brand of ball clear to the end of the season. Under the strain of a pennant fight from which his team was not eliminated until almost the last day of the struggle this young Texas leaguer never faltered or "blew."

Four Basket Ball Games Played in Single Day

Johnny Beckman, professional basketball star, believes he has set an endurance record by playing on three different teams in four games during one day, losing two, winning two, and scoring 20 points.

Beckman played at 3:10 p. m. with his Detroit team, losing to the Long Island pros, and managed to line up with the home team at Union City, N. J., at 5 p. m. in time to defeat Trenton.

In the evening he played with the losing Detroit team in New York against Renaissance at 9:15, and helped Rochester Centralists beat the Visitation club at Brooklyn in a game starting at 10:20 p. m.

Former Frisco Manager Is Named Coach at Navy Selection of E. T. Mohler of Alhambra, Calif., who has been captain and manager of the San Francisco club of the Pacific Coast league, to be field coach of the Navy basketball team was announced by Commander Jonas H. Ingram, director of athletics at the Naval academy.

In making the announcement, Commander Ingram said direction of Navy basketball this year would be under new system, patterned after the academy's football system, with Lieutenant Commander William A. Hicks as coach, and Mohler as field coach. In his service in California, Ingram said Mohler had built a reputation for developing young players.

Looking to Uhle

Pitcher George Uhle, obtained from Cleveland by the Detroit Tigers in a trade during the winter, is looked upon as one of the big cogs in the Detroit's defensive this season. His arm is right and he expects a big year.

Cage Game Too Rough

Bill Barrett, a great basketball player, doesn't think much of the cage sport as a conditioner for baseball. "It's too tough," he says. Barrett says the best year he ever had was after a winter up in Vermont engaging in winter sports like tobogganing, skating and skiing. Which brings to mind Alex Mettler of Fresno, Calif., who says that he made a trip of 200 miles this winter, just to see some snow. He reported to the White Sox this spring in fine condition.

BASEBALL NOTES

Hughie Critz, star second baseman, will captain the Cincinnati Reds this year.

Glenn Wright, the former Pittsburgh star, is the new field captain of the Brooklyn Robins.

The Virginia and Eastern Shore leagues, which failed last year, may yet be revived for 1929.

Back in 1880, C. R. Partridge hit a baseball for a distance of 354 feet 10 inches in a fungo-hitting contest.

Charles A. Coniskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox, is entering his fifty-third year in professional baseball.

Sixteen of the 46 baseball players in the Hollywood club's spring training camp at San Diego were negro players.

Rip Collins, now with the St. Louis Browns, has been previous service with Detroit, New York and Cincinnati.

New owners in Baltimore bought Ty Cobb as manager but learned he would not consider the job for less than $40,000 a year.

Yankee stadium will seat 90,000 baseball fans this summer. The new seats are so far away numbers are almost necessary.

Frank Rodgers, outfielder of the Frederick team last season, has been signed by Manager Mickey Keilher of the Hagerstown Huba.

Johnny Mann, shortstop for the Dallas Steers part of last season, has been sold to the Little Rock club of the Southern association.

Rabbit Maraville, veteran shortstop with the Boston Braves, says the coming National league race will be between the Cubs, Giants and Cards.

In 1901, Billy Robinson, playing second base for Cincinnati, had seven chances on a muddy field and booted them all. They came in different innings.

Eddie Moore, who campaigned with Toledo last season on option from the Boston Braves, has been acquired by purchase. He had been a Boston holdout.

The St. Louis Cardinals have purchased the Fort Wayne club of the Central league and the Scottsdale club of the Middle Atlantic league for baseball farms.

Waterloo of the Mississippi Valley league has traded Third Baseman Duncan (Spot) Grant to Springfield of the Three-I league for two rookie players to be announced later.

The northwest corner of the ring in Toronto's Coliseum is considered a fix by fighters. Recently, all five winners came from the other side.

Carl Driskell, hard-hitting semi-pro outfielder of Lynchburg, Va., has signed a contract with the Greensboro club of the Piedmont league.

Bill Burwell, veteran right-handed pitcher of the Indianapolis team of the American association, has been engaged to assist in coaching baseball at Butler university, Indianapolis.

DISCOURAGES PINK TEAS ON DIAMOND

Doesn't Like Fraternizing With Rival Clubs.

Fraternizing of baseball players of rival teams will be absent during the coming season at Newfield park, home of Bridgeport's Bears, if Hans Lobert and President Fred J. Voss have anything to say about it. This much discussed problem in major and minor leagues has been settled once and for all by the Bridgeport clubs heads who feel that a team on the field is out to win ball games, not for a social gathering.

Manager Lobert's opinion in the matter is just a reflection of the stand taken by John McGraw, who claims that ball players can gather socially off the field, but on it they should be enemies, writes Joseph F. Kraynick in the Sporting News. Lobert claims that fans who come early to ball parks gain the wrong impression when they see players of rival teams in close conference in front of the stands and on the diamond.

Early arrivals come to see the players in action just as much as during a game and they don't care to watch a couple of players tell each other jokes when they should be out in the field," says Lobert. "The minute a ball player arrives on the field the only thing that should be on his mind is to win that afternoon's game and he should bend all his efforts to that end by practicing."

Two other teams in the league are expected to follow this idea, as managers of the Springfield and Hartford clubs are graduates of the McGraw school. The league heads have ignored this and the habit has been prevalent for several years.

"Riding" opposing players, another important phase in organized baseball, is another thing that will be watched by Manager Lobert. In his opinion this is an important part of the game and sums it up as follows: "If any of my players can take the mind of an opposing batter off his mind for just a second by some 'wise crack' when the situation is critical then he has done something to win the game, but rowdiness is out of the question."

"None of my players will be allowed to become obnoxious by his actions, but I do want them fighting for the game."

Vance Gets Raise

Dazzy Vance, star pitcher for the Brooklyn Dodgers, has been granted a raise in salary to $25,000 for which he had been holding out. This is a raise of $5,000 a year.

Sport Notes

Horse and dog racing is noiding the sports in Florida instead of Cuba. Succeeded, as it were.

Red Delp lives in Reading but has done all his fighting in other rings. He is a middleweight.

Eric Krenz, giant Stanford star, broke the world's discus throw record with a toss of 163 feet 8 1/2 inches.

Douglas Mills of Elgin was elected captain of the University of Illinois basketball team at the annual dinner.

Waltie Norgard of Minnesota fractured his right wrist twice during the football season and again in basketball.

The difference in the sprinting styles of Charley Paddock and Charley Rohab is that Paddock is a knee-lift sprinter.

Now that we have a golfometer which records strokes honestly some one ought to invent a liar-proof device for measuring fish.

All Doc Spears will need at Minnesota next fall is a guard, two tackles, and end and a quarterback, to succeed graduating stars.

Most of the doctors are becoming specialists with short office hours. Therefore, they are not liable to be paged while on the No. 5 green.

Robert Chapman of Marion, Ind., center on this year's University of Michigan basketball team, was elected captain of the 1929 basketball squad.

One of the duties of Dr. L. G. Haskell of the University of Florida is to teach the freshmen the rules of football, baseball and basketball. He has regular classes.

Spike Webb has plenty of heavy-weight material at the Navy. In meets this year Chapple, Moret and Swan all have won bouts in that class.

Pugilism is no longer a rough pastime. One of its most interesting features is the list of distinguished personages who occupy ringside seats.

Of 500 high schools in Iowa, 700 have boys' basketball teams. Girls of 351 schools play the game. Football is played in only 275, baseball in 380 and 217 have track teams.

MY FAVORITE STORIES

By IRVIN S. COBB

Something New in Natural History

AS PERCY KNIGHT, the English comedian, told me the story, there was once a fellow countryman of his, a seafaring man, who had a turn for all colors. Naturally his fancy led him to marines. In old times aboard ship he practiced his art until he had mastered two studies—a brig running before the wind in the midst of a lot of cottony-looking waves, and a sloop beating her way along a rocky shore.

This done, the ambitious one decided to give up sailing and turn artist to earnest. He would drift across the country with his materials strapped to his back and do signs for public houses. He had a natural fondness for public houses, anyhow.

On his first day's travel he got two commissions. On the morning of the second day at a point well inland he came upon a wayside tavern. Above its door hung a signboard so battered by the rains of years and so bleached by the sun that the original design upon it was practically obliterated: only a few pale streaks of color remained. In the doorway lounged the proprietor.

The wayfarer scented another job. He halted, introduced himself as a craftsman and for a price offered to refit the signboard.

"Right," said the owner, and a bargain was struck. "Now, then," said the public housekeeper, "what's your notion about doing me a sign?"

"Well, on this side 'ere, I'll do you a smart brig scuddin' along in 'art a gale," said the artist, "and on the other side we'll 'ave a tidy sloop makin' for port with a sunset behind 'er."

"Wyte a bit, matey, wyte a bit," said the publican, "what's you read? Don't you see it says funded that this 'ere is the Red Lion Inn? It's been the Red Lion Inn for 70 years. You'll paint me a red lion there or the deal's off."

The artist fetched a sigh of resignation. "Ave your own wyte about it," he agreed. "I'll paint you your bloomin' red lion. But I warn you, now it's goin' to look quite a bit like a full-rigged ship!"

Henry's Way of Coming Home

THIS one was a favorite with the late Joseph H. Choate. I heard him use it more than once when he was making after-dinner speeches.

"I had a friend named Jones," said Mr. Choate, "witness son, although of comparatively tender years, was addicted to the reprehensible habit of indulging in alcoholic beverages. The father packed him off to Harvard in the hope that the youth might become interested in educational matters and lose his craving for hard liquor."

"It appeared that the father's hopes were to be gratified, because the young man, in writing home to ask that his allowance be increased, told his sire that he had mended his ways and now was devoting himself exclusively to the undertaking of acquiring learning. The senior Jones was most highly gratified, the secret was run up to Cambridge and personally to congratulate his offspring upon the reformation which had been effected."

"To make the meeting more pleasant he would take the youngster by surprise. So, without announcing his intention, he started."

"But the train was delayed and my friend did not reach Cambridge until after midnight. He got in a cab and rode to the boy's boarding house. The building was dark."

"Leaving the cab at the curbing, he felt his way up the walk, rang the doorbell and pounded on the door. Eventually an upstairs window was opened and an elderly lady, the proprietor of the establishment, showed her head."

"Well," she called out, "what is wanted?"

"Does Mr. Henry Jones, Junior live here?" asked the father.

"Yes," said the old lady wearily. "Carry him in."

Ancient Gods

Among the gods of the early British who were driven into Ireland was the sun god, Nod, or Ludd, as he was called. His name appears in Ludgate, and it is thought that his temple stood on what is now Ludgate hill in London. Apollo, the sun god of the Greeks and Romans, was worshipped throughout the sunny lands of the south.

In 1894 Helena, Mont., was founded by a band of prospectors headed by John Cavan. On June 15, 1894, an abundance of gold was located.

Whale's Yield of Oil

The amount of oil which can be taken from a whale depends on the individual whale. The sperm whale yields from 5 to 15 barrels of oil, averaging about 25 to 30 for cows and 75 to 90 for bulls. In 1861 there was a record of a whale yielding 274 barrels of oil.

HOW TO LIVE LONGER

By JOHN CLARENCE FUNK
STYLE VS. SENSE

WINTER in the northern woods can be extremely bitter and usually is very cold. Therefore, put on warm clothing which is absolutely necessary for those whose daily work is done in these magnificent forests. But because the lumberman dresses himself against the rigors of the Arctic blasts is no excuse for the man or woman who in a temperate latitude dons excessive clothing for the mere reason that the calendar indicates the presence of the winter season.

There are many days when fur coats and other heavy garments would serve better the peg than on one's back. To realize this fact and to put the idea into practice would be a life-saver for some, a disease-breaker for others and would mean continuous high vitality throughout the year for still another large group.

While there is no desire in any way to lessen the popularity of the coat of fur, one should not put all one's eggs in a single basket on this important question. This practice is perhaps one of the main reasons for many colds, cases of pneumonia and deaths.

An auxiliary coat of lighter weight is required for the forty to sixty degree days. If you own one, watch your thermometer and use it when it registers within those limits. If you do not possess such a garment get it at once, even if you have to pay a dollar down and the rest eventually! Believe it or not, it's a lack in a real hazard; its ownership and use, a positive health insurance policy.

For those whose activities are indoors, winter-weight clothing is superfluous. If the temperature of your home or office was maintained at fifty degrees there might be some reason for heavy-weight suits and dresses. But seventy to seventy-five degrees is summer heat. And that is what you likely are living in. So far as the indoor temperature is concerned light summer clothes would be more logical. Wouldn't they?

To conclude, it is not a safe thing to sweat in a fur coat; and it is equally unsafe to perspire in home or office when a freezing temperature awaits you outside.

If you are a woodchopper or outdoors person, heavy everything then. Otherwise, dress for comfort and safety. There will still be plenty of days left, even then, on which to be stylish.

CONCERN FOR LITTLE THINGS

THE other day a congenial mosquito made the personal acquaintance of a lady while she was enjoying the balmy breezes on her porch. The lady soon became itchy, she scratched—and yesterday she died. Also, a few days since, a man scratched his hand on a rusty nail. "A mere touch," said he—and yesterday they buried him, too.

These two stories are indicative of the average attitude toward insect bites and minor injuries. And while they are extreme cases, they nevertheless eloquently demonstrate an important point in the how-to-live-longer plan.

The amount of damage that bacteria can accomplish by way of the cut, bite, scratch or burn depends, of course, upon the virulence of the particular germ in the case. And while a relatively large number of injuries of this character will remain local to their manifestations, there is no use taking any chances on the possibility of more serious trouble. This is especially true since the preventive measures are so accessible, so easily applied and so cheap.

The majority of local infections can be prevented if the initial cause is promptly treated with antiseptics. A safe rule is to disinfect every small flesh wound, insect sting, burn and cut with an approved preparation.

The above suggestion, however, must not be considered an propaganda for self-treatment. Quite the contrary. As a general rule, the local application of a contraindicated germicide will settle the matter. If in spite of precautions infection manifests itself, then "double time" to your physician. Delay may be extremely unsafe. The principle of "great oaks from little acorns grow" applies to the little hurts of the body as well as to trees. General blood poisoning is a disease "ouk" and the merest scratch of the skin has been known to cause it.

A word concerning powder burns and punctured wounds. They can cause tetanus. No matter how small the wound, rush to your doctor. And it takes a physician who knows his business to administer the necessary prevention.

Use care therefore in the little things, and thus kill the big one before they kill you.

A PALESTINE CRUISE

By REV. C. A. PARKER

We reached Gibraltar on the morning, and left at midnight of the third day. Gibraltar is one of four British strongholds in the Mediterranean, the others being Malta, Cyprus and Egypt. It was captured from Spain in 1704. In 1799 a determined effort was made to retake it—a siege lasting four years. It is not been for the iron resolution of its commander, Sir George Elliott, the Spanish would have been successful. A fine statue of Sir George now adorns Alameda Gardens, a very attractive pleasure resort. Some English authorities and statesmen have advocated restoring the fortress to Spain, Malta being a sufficient protection to English interests in the Mediterranean, thus to save her an annual expense of over a million dollars in peace times; $50,000,000 having been spent in its defenses through the years. Gibraltar is at once a fortress, a colony and a prison. It is about two miles from north to south and two-thirds of a mile east and west. It has three summits, the highest being in the center, 1395 feet. As you approach it, it seems like a large crouching lion. We lay under its shadow on the north side.

The rock is honeycombed with tunnels from whose port holes gunners can pour deadly fire upon an approaching enemy, guns commanding every inch of the straits, capable of throwing balls weighing more than a ton.

At present the chief defense is from the top of this high rock. These great guns are manned from every angle, and so high up that they cannot be reached by the fire from a ship. While the tunnels are not now needed for defense, they are not needed in case of siege.

These tunnels seem to pierce the rock at all points and at all elevations. They are about ten feet high and ten feet wide, with a distinct up grade. One of the tunnels, known as the Windsor, has a continuous curve for nearly a half mile. Visitors, except English, are not allowed in the upper galleries, the highest level being 590 feet above the sea; and in the dark and dampness, it is high enough.

Gibraltar has a population of 27,400, often much increased by the presence of soldiers and sailors. It is built up against the side of the rock with rather unornamental structures. There are Barbary Moors, Highlanders, Spaniards, Africans, Maltese and others, each dressed in his own distinctive costume. We got here our first impression of Oriental life, and also our most persistent demand for tips. The Oriental who drove me around, although paid by the cruise management, strenuously entreated me for cash in sign language. I did not "choose" to understand. I afterward learned that he had performed only part of the drive he had been paid for. These characters give as little as possible and they often have good success with the American tourist who wants to be thought wealthy.

The Rock is nearly an island. A narrow strip of land, about a mile long connects it with Spain. It is called "No Man's Land," a neutral zone, under military guard. From sunset to sunrise you can not pass. On the Spanish side is a old unprogressive, dirty little burg; perhaps a fair specimen of Spain in general. It is in marked contrast to what we find on the English side.

A day of sailing over Mediterranean waters brought us to Algiers, in Northern Africa, a town of 138,708 people. This section is under French mandate. The town is divided into the French, bordering on the sea, and back of it the Arab part. The contrast is very great. In the French section it is clean and modern, with many new and large buildings; in the Arab section it is old in appearance, the streets are narrow, dark and dirty. The people are as dark and dirty as the streets; as dark in character and design as in complexion. Traveling through one of the narrow streets, lined on either side with dirty shops and crowded with all grades of low humanity, one of our party, a well dressed and stately appearing man from New York had his pockets picked of over $30.

We were lucky to come through with as little loss.

For Algiers has come down in history as the chief seat of piracy. Peoples of all nations who ventured near were preyed upon. During Washington's administration $3000 was demanded for the liberation of certain Americans; but Washington considered the price too high. How the release was affected, if at all, I do not know. England alone in six years, lost 350 ships and 6000 of her subjects were enslaved. At one time there were 115 Americans enslaved in Algiers. It is estimated that over 600,000 Christian people have suffered the horrors of bondage in Algiers of whom only a small fraction were ever rescued.

Many attempts were made by leading nations to stamp out piracy, but without avail, and so tribute money and ransom went on year after year.

At last, in June 1815, Commodore Decatur with his fleet, appeared before Algiers, announcing that the custom must cease, and demanding the release of the American people. The Dey, impressed by the appearance of the Commodore and his ships, reluctantly agreed, but requested that in order to keep up the royal prestige, he be given an annual gift of gunpowder. To this the Commodore replied that if he took the powder, he would have to take the bullets too.

Unconditional surrender was demanded and accorded.

We visited the factory where all kinds of beautiful Turkish rugs are made. Here we saw the process of rug weaving; the looms being handled by young girls, or little girls, and in a most skillful fashion. The pattern is laid before the weaver, who examines it, then darts to the loom. The girls are slaves, we were told, Arabs, perhaps, sold in this country by their parents who are too poor to support them. Maturity and marriage come early in life. Indeed some marriages take place almost in infancy. In that factory there was a couple, the husband being thirteen and the wife twelve. These waifs, working rapidly and skillfully, seem contented and happy.

A day and two nights of sailing eastward from Algiers, along the southern side of the Mediterranean brought us at anchor near the city of Tunis, northern Africa. The ship canal up to Tunis being too shallow for our ship, we were put off at La Goulette, seven miles north. We were conveyed to Tunis by electric along the banks of the canal, there being two salt water lakes, one on either side. While the African city we have just left is called "Algiers the white", a French writer, to exalt Tunis above, has called this "Tunis the very white."

Tunis is the capital of Tunisia and is one of the largest cities of north Africa; next in size to Alexandria and Cairo. Its population is Moslems, Italians, Jews, Maltese and French, the French being the controlling government. In 1881, the French in a rather high handed fashion assumed the protectorate of all Tunisia. The former ruler, the Bey, has only a semi-official standing, living as a gentleman of leisure in his palace.
